Before the warrants could be executed, a gang of armed men commenced slaughtering the negroes. The New Orleans Bulletin states that one hundred negroes were killed and wounded. The office of the newspaper "The Progress" was gutted, its type and presess thrown into the street, and Mr. Durand, one of its editors, lynched. Condition of Business

(From the New York Daily Bulletin.) The anticipations of an active fall trade are to a fair extent being realized. During the last few weeks business has steadily improved, and there is now a reasonable demand for and a good trade in all articles of general consumption. The West is taking large amounts of goods, and dealers are purchasing freely. Southern buyers are also here, and in greater force than at any period since 1860 fit replenishing their stocks. Individual purchases are for the most part for limited amounts, a fact that insidates the degree of caution still characterizing business. But the aggregate of sales is large, and our city merchants are rejoiding in a better trade than they have known for severallyears. Of course there is nothing like the heavy movement that distinguished former prosperous years. Dealers exhibit an evident carefulness to limit their purchases to the more immediate wants of local trade. But as the supply of goods both in the West and South is unusually small, consumers having for a long time been able to make only the most pressing purchasers; the activity that now prevails is regarded as by no means spasmodic, but rather the forerunner for a larger and more bealthy business than has been known for several years.

A marked feature of the merchandize market is the general contraction of credits. Of course first-class houses can obtain all the credit they please, but the liberal terms offered to them by our leading firms generally lead them to choose cash terms or short time that is almost equivalent to cash purchases. The fact is, it has ceased to be reputable for merchants of any class to transact business, entirely on credit as in former times. The consequence is that buyers make smaller and more frequent purchases, and thus the business is more evenly distributed over the whole season. The long credits of the past seem to have given way to a more healthy cash or "short time" business, and both dealers and consumers will doubtless find this arrangement to be more profitable and satisfactory.
